Microsoft.WindowsAzure.Diagnostics seems to be the one to use for the Web App role and Microsoft.WindowsAzure.Diagnostics.Analytics for the Worker role Is there any meaningful difference between the two? A: According to the documentation, the "Analytics" version of the Microsoft.WindowsAzure.Diagnostics package does not contain any APIs that are specific to WAFarmers. It is used for general analytics processing. The "Diagnostics" version of the package includes the same underlying functionality, plus cloud-specific diagnostics APIs. The DataSourceContentType class, for example, is used to upload diagnostics data to diagnostics storage. You can think of the Azure packages as the framework into which you can plug your own code. You can write your own code to interact with the Azure package, or you can use the existing APIs to send diagnostics data or get error logs from Azure as a data source.
