Finalist's Martin Wallace shows off his home-made armor made from studded old jeans Martin Wallace, also known as The Stud Weaver, is a retired shoe salesman living in Clintonville. The King of Studs is famous for his over-the-top creations—made from what he describes as “the death-defying studs that once adorned leather.” Wallace is a self-described “welder by trade,” and so most of his work is for local bands and musicians who can't afford custom designed sets and overalls. But when he's not working on his creative projects, he's still working on selling shoes. Wallace is currently promoting his wares at the Overbrook Acres Urban Market in Madison. So what exactly is a DIY stud-weaver? “I'm an inventor,” Wallace says. “I fix broken stuff, make things and find creative ways to repurpose stuff. My ultimate goal is to create pieces 6d1f23a050
